The Layer palette The primary way in which you interact with the Photoshop layers palette is by using the various tools. You can add or remove layers from the Toolbox, as shown in Figure 2-7. You can also create new layers by selecting the appropriate icon from the Layer palette (such as the Add Layer icon and the New Layer icon). From the icons on the Layers palette, you can move, resize, and copy them to the canvas. FIGURE 2-7: The Layers palette is your primary interface with the layers and their tools. You have the option of always seeing your layers open in a tabbed window (which makes it easy to switch among them) or closed in a separate window (which enables you to keep your other Photoshop images open). You can easily switch from a tabbed window to the separate window using the Mode button in the bottom-right corner of the Layers palette. In addition, you can choose from several different color schemes for the palette and choose whether to see the layer types with different color overlays (or keep things simple).

Prevalence of cholesterol gallstones in the Czech Republic. The aim of this study was to investigate the prevalence of cholesterol gallstone disease in the Czech Republic. The study population included 1162 subjects from five regions of the Czech Republic. The use of ultrasound and medical records was performed to determine the prevalence of cholesterol gallstones. Intra- and extrahepatic biliary tree calculi were detected in 6.7% and 0.6% of subjects, respectively. The prevalence was higher in women: 7.8% of women compared to 5.6% of men. About a third of patients with gallstones (30%) experienced prior episodes of acute biliary colic. While the prevalence of cholesterol gallstones was increased in urban areas and age group 45-60 years, it was decreased in our Northern-European country.52nd Army (Soviet Union) The 52nd Army was a field army of the Soviet Union's Red Army during World War II, active from 1939 to 1945. History The army fought in the Soviet invasion of Poland, Battle of Moscow, the Białystok–Minsk Offensive, the Battle of the Seelow Heights, the East Pomeranian Offensive and the fighting in Hungary. The army was renamed from 45th Rifle Corps to 52nd Rifle Corps in late September 1941 as part of a series of renumbering operations. The army continued to fight in the Operation Barbarossa and the Battle of Stalingrad. In the Moscow Offensive, the army covered the flank of the 4th Tank Army by launching the counterattack of the 60th Rifle Corps at Novogrozny, with the assistance of 12th Tank Corps. During the Siege of Leningrad, the army destroyed six German siege works. For this achievement the 8th Tank Corps became the first tank corps to receive the Order of the Red Banner twice. In late January 1945 the army was transferred to East Prussia where it participated in the Courland Pocket Campaign. In March it was evacuated by sea to the Kurland. The army fought in the East Prussian Offensive, the Prague Offensive, the Prague Offensive (part 2), the Prague Offensive (part 3), the Prague Offensive (part 4), the Prague Offensive (part 5) and the Vienna Offensive. In February 1945 it took part in the Prague Offensive (part 6). Between March and June it fought in the Vienna Offensive, the March–April 1945 invasion of Czechoslovakia, the Prague Offensive (part 7

The state of psychiatry today. The author draws on his professional and personal experiences in clinical psychiatry, academic psychiatry, and clinical neuropsychology to describe the state of psychiatry today. He comments on the advantages and disadvantages of professionalising and specialising. The number of psychiatrists per 100,000 population is insufficient to cope with the number of patients seeking psychiatric help. The author outlines the way in which the medical problem of depressed patients in general practice may be recognised and treated. The author also comments on the future of psychiatry, and how psychotherapy may soon replace medications as the standard treatment for depression.The automotive industry has been in the forefront of information technology (IT) planning for several years, having created dedicated IT departments in their organisations, built internal IT infrastructures and invested in IT products. As a result, it is well positioned to meet industry obligations and comply with legislative requirements, including European regulations such as the Connected Vehicle Safety Regulation (CVS2) and the upcoming Active Safety Regulation (ASR). Failing to do so could have consequences, not only for the consumer, but also for the entire automotive industry, which would be placed at a competitive disadvantage compared to its non-manufacturer peers. The automotive industry is now at a pivotal point to develop and strengthen its digital transformation strategy, and ultimately transform the entire business into an omni-channel information company. Our report assesses the current state of automotive IT and highlights a roadmap with recommendations and recommendations for OEMs and vendors to accelerate the process of digital transformation. If you want to know more about the automotive industry and how IT is going to be its saviour, watch our "Automotive IT Market Insights webinar".
