The models for the performance of the NPF group were built based on the reported delay of a single peak (OR). In addition, the study population was small in our study and the patients did not undergo additional interventions such as VF or anticoagulation therapy. The most important limitation was the small number of cases, and thus, we could not evaluate the relationship between the model and death due to PE in each group. To validate the accuracy of the model, further prospective clinical studies should be conducted. In conclusion, the NPF group had a longer time to reach the peak of pulmonary artery pressure and to achieve the reduction rate of pulmonary artery pressure than the CFR group. We have demonstrated that the performance of the NPF group would be sufficient to decrease the risk of death due to PE in patients with high-risk PE.
