Plenty of people know the valley for its cows, the Sierra Lakes and a good music festival, but University of California at Berkeley political scientist Philip McCombs is quick to remind that the region has long been a power centre. "It turns out if you look at California history," McCombs says in his office at UC Berkeley's Haas School of Business, "that history is vast and it's north-to-south, it goes through the San Francisco Bay Area and now we have a new centre." Ontario's new Liberal government has been signalling a few departures from the status quo for some time and experts in Bay Area and California politics say that the provincial electoral results Saturday open the door to a rapid overhaul of the Bay Area economy. While the new premier, Kathleen Wynne, has yet to set the day exactly when manufacturing jobs start leaving, it's no secret where she expects the exodus to begin. "The effects of climate change, of offshore electricity production in British Columbia, of the demographic profile in the San Joaquin Valley and the increases in trade and tariff costs," she told the Star in an interview, all have conspired to create openings for business here. Daytime temperatures in the Bay Area fluctuated from cold and dreary Friday morning to extremely hot and sunny. Afternoon highs reached into the 60s and even 70s in some areas. By Wednesday, officials expected average temperatures in the South Bay to drop from their record high of 61 degrees at the start of the week to below 54 degrees over the weekend, with only a slight chance of frost predicted. In the East Bay, the temperature was expected to climb 30 degrees, but officials were not as clear about the inland values in that region. The B.C. government is the largest beneficiary of Canadian export goods, and the province's Liberals have promised to intensify efforts to woo more U.S. customers of its products as a response to President Donald Trump's protectionist rhetoric in the United States. What's new:

The Divine Divinity, also Divine Delegation, is a state of being or experience that a human being can possess to a degree, believed to be greater in heaven, some believe manifested as a greater love for God of a believer. It also is the sense of being and effect of God in the heart of a person. The concept of divine possession is mentioned in the Book of Numbers, it describes being on the ground in front of the battle line, where God apparently gave Moses the power to lead Israel. Moses said he was filled with God's spirit and would scare the enemy troops with a loud cry. Another usage of this term denotes the state that God bestowed on Elijah as he was taken up to heaven by a fiery chariot.. It may be a temporary, one-time occurrence, or it may be the experience of a believer many times in life. Among members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, the term is more frequently used to describe the experience of having the spirit of God descend on a human or living being, accompanied by a feeling of peace and joy and also in times of extreme need, and with the restoration of power lost in connection with earthly suffering. Divine is from the Latin deus, meaning god; and divinely, meaning 'having a godlike nature.'; the Divine is this being or state in human beings or gods. Historically, the term referred to the experience of prophets and apostles like Moses and others in many sources of history, or by the worlds oldest scriptures, the oldest scripture of the church, the Book of Mormon. It is occasionally used in reference to Latter-day Saint prophets, such as in Isaiah 29 or in the Temple Lot and Amulek priesthood keys. It is believed to have been practiced by a good portion of early followers of the Hebrews, and similar claims of possession in the so-called visionaries are common, these occurrences during the 19th century often involved religious groups demanding belief in a capability beyond the laws of nature. Etymology The notion of divine possession in the Old Testament: Numbers 20:12, after the failure to take the Jericho city, when they were defeated and the Israelites were marching through a desert, Moses said when Joshua was to command them to battle, and the Israelites were going to chant their war cry, "The Lord, the Lord, his arm might be with us, in battle.❖"
