Q: Angular HTTP Post with Shttp not working on Google App Engine NodeJS I have an AngularJS app deployed on Google App Engine and have an entry point being an HTTP GET function to ensure app route is hit and a function that will perform an HTTP POST that is setup as following: var url = ""; //Shttp(put,post).post(url, data); Shttp({method: "POST", url: url, data: postData}).then(function(response) { return $location.path("/tasks/status"); }); If I attempt to run this code on my local machine it works as expected. However, when deployed to Google app engine it hangs for a very long time before returning the request object and never returning the promise and thus the "then" function never gets called. The url has been verified by the logs on Google app engine to be the correct path for the request. Am I missing something here? A: If the API is being called via POST, then you should set the request's method and send the request with the POST method. Shttp({method: "POST", url: url, data: postData, headers: {'Content-Type': 'application/x-www-form-urlencoded'}}) This will call your post method and should be reflected in the logs. Q: How do I create a link to a SharePoint document in InfoPath? I am creating a web part that creates a list of the documents that I already created in the SharePoint list. How do I create a link to a SharePoint document in InfoPath? I have created the list already and it has the necessary fields to build out my list. A: For the sample below, make sure the selected Document Template for List will be also set to Document (or something similar). If you want to add links to SP documents, you can do it the following way: Go to your document library in SharePoint and click on the "File" tab. The options should be in the "New Document" or "New Item" subsection. If you first-order phase transition by temperature increase and explored the effect of chirality of edge atoms on the transport properties of edge states. The edge states were proved to be spin degenerate and exhibit a topological transition as the spin orientation of the magnetic edge atoms is reversed. The spin-degenerate edge states present the same transport properties as the non-degenerate edge states, such as the topological quantum yield and transconductance. As the temperature reaches the first-order phase transition temperature, the conductance of degenerate edge states shows its peak. By tuning the electron energy, the number of scattering states in the system, the spin configuration of edge atoms and the exchange splitting between the edge atoms, we have studied the modification to the first-order phase transition. The magnetoresistance of our system does not change at the first-order phase transition.
