I want to get the total products price with a simple SQL query. This is my SQL: SELECT (SUM(products_price)) AS total FROM products So what I want to do is to sum up all products_price from that table. I could use a loop in a controller to get the total amount but is there a way to do this without a loop in Laravel? A: First of all you can use the selectSum in the database facade to count the total sum of a column: $total = DB::table('products')->selectSum('products_price')->sum(); In Laravel you can use the sum() method of the Query Builder to do that: $total = DB::table('products') ->select('products_price','product_id') ->selectRaw('SUM(products_price) AS total') ->sum(); To get the total price from all products you can use a join: $total = DB::table('products') ->join('products_prices', 'products.products_id', '=', 'products_prices.product_id') ->select('products.products_id','products.products_price','products.product_name') ->selectRaw('SUM(products.products_price) AS total') ->sum(); And finally you can group them by product_id: $total = DB::table('products') ->join('products_prices', 'products.products_id', '=', 'products_prices.product_id')
