We present a collection of Files with a full preview on each file.Earth is an amazing place to visit, but it can also be an amazing place to live. In fact, for many it's a necessity. While some nations are still struggling with pollution and deforestation, others are flourishing, using remote sensing to gather real-time information on everything from climate change to deforestation and business to education. This month we're featuring 10 nations (and one territory) that embrace a planetary future. 10 (1) Gap Year Ideas After you've finished counting down the days until you travel the world, plan a year in the States! Writing in Forbes, Steve Jalsevac explains, "There's a lot of frustration in the U.S. economy, with high unemployment and a lack of opportunity. Many U.S. students are graduating with huge amounts of student loan debt, which is growing more than $1 trillion, and the number of Americans without health insurance is at an all-time high. If your dream is to travel the world, planning a year in the U.S. might be a perfect way to do it." 9 (4) How to Watch Live Earth 2011 Do you know how to watch Live Earth 2011? Okay, so it's simple: Tune in to NASA, the United Nations or any of your local news outlets. This year, more than 2.7 billion people are expected to tune in to watch the five-hour event take place on 7 July. Even if you're nowhere near a TV or a computer, NASA says to just listen to the live stream through its radio feed; if you want to watch through the satellite, you can tune into Dish Network. 8 (2) Space for Thought "From this day to the ending of the world, we in it shall be remembered" is an inspiring quote by Maya Angel
