The game "Martha Is Dead" is a steampunk psychological horror game set in the heart of 19th century London. The player controls a convict, sentenced to death, in his cell. After an assault on the prison guards, you are free to roam the cell and its haunting surroundings. The main goal of the game is not to survive, but to fight your inner demons and ultimate fate. Game "Martha Is Dead" features a top notch 2D animation, both cut scenes and gameplay. It is directed by the acclaimed French film director Stéphane Akerman (The Tribe, C'est La Vie) who personally oversaw the creation of the music score. To capture the old, romantic ambience of London during the Victorian era, the game was scripted in a vintage-futuristic language (the only official, old fashioned, style). Game "Martha Is Dead" is a game that was chock-full of challenges. The animation was extremely complex, especially when it comes to the freedom in the player's movements. It required a delicate balance to create a relaxed feeling while ensuring that the cinematic experience would not be ruined by camera movements that would make you dizzy or annoying. "After designing the game from scratch and finally obtaining the desired aesthetic, working with the composer was a real pleasure. Francesca has a unique voice and great musicality. She communicates with ideas and plays with the themes of the game, which allows us to communicate efficiently. She also shares her style in the composition and breaks all the rules". - Stéphane Akerman "Nostalgia is always there somewhere, in every form, even in the darkness. This is the overall vision I had for Martha Is Dead, and I was happy to discover with Francesca, that the history of music is unique, and the universe of music too. And that like everything else, there is also a taste of the past". - Francois Wambacq "We wanted to create an atmosphere which only music could convey. The visual qualities of the game have become very abstract, and had to be largely ambiguous. The lighting and the sound are two of the main elements that convey the story". - Francois Wambacq "The music in Martha Is Dead has been composed with all the qualities of a great soundtrack: great evocative melodies, powerful tones, a great atmosphere and a genuine feel-good factor. Music is the most honest way to express ourselves and the director and writer's vision

Saints Row: The Third takes place 5 years after the events of Saints Row 2, and is the third in the series of open-world, third-person action games in the Saints Row franchise. The game is heavily influenced by GTA IV, another Rockstar game, with a particular emphasis on social and economic satire, a la Midnight Club series, and in-jokes from its developer, Volition, such as pop culture references and use of the engine. It is the first game in the series to be created with proprietary Rockstar Editor (RSE), and the second game released on the PlayStation Portable (PSP). Release Reception The game received "favorable" reviews on both platforms according to the review aggregation website Metacritic. GameSpot gave it 7.5 out of 10, praising its "infinite" and "recyclable" weapons and re-usable weapons, and felt that its game engine makes the game a "fast and furious shoot-'em-up arcade game" despite some flaws. IGN gave it 7.0 out of 10, praising the game for its "fast-paced gameplay" but commented that its presentation would be appealing for fans of Grand Theft Auto IV and Grand Theft Auto: Episodes from Liberty City, despite overall dissatisfaction with the city.
