Here is just a small list of categories of software you can search for!In general, most methods of setting a permanent magnet on a rotor of an electric motor do not allow the rotation of the rotor to proceed when the rotor is misaligned with the stator. Therefore, an electric motor with an eccentric rotor is inevitably and disadvantageously constructed with multiple fixed magnets. The general electric motor cannot be constructed to be used in a hard working condition, when the size of the permanent magnets is reduced. On the other hand, even in a method in which a rotor is set on a magnet by a magnet set ring, when the rotor is misaligned with the stator, the rotation of the rotor cannot be progressed and the fixation of the permanent magnets to the rotor becomes unstable.

Furthermore, even if a rotor is set to the stator after rotating the rotor by 180°, by the method disclosed in Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open No. 5-104037, since the rotor is brought into contact with the stator by its stopper pin, when the rotor is misaligned with the stator, the rotor is retracted before the rotor is set on the stator. As a result, even if the rotor is set on the stator, the retraction of the rotor is inevitable. That is, the rotor is retracted by an axial movement of the rotor. Therefore, there is a problem that the amount of the resiliency is lost and then the number of components is increased when the resiliency is provided in the stopper pin. Moreover, in a method in which a flat magnet is set on a rotor (see FIG. 4 of the present invention), in the case of a structure in which a rotor is brought into contact with a stat
