Q: What is the most efficient way to manipulate strings in SAS? I am currently working on a SAS project with two others. One of the requirements is to swap two characters in a string. I am looking for an optimal algorithm. I have found some solutions, such as the following one: `PROC SQL; SELECT REPLACE(`str`, 'ab', 'ad') AS str2 FROM `myTable`; QUIT;` But for some reason I can't seem to get the performance I'm looking for. Can you kindly point me to the best way to achieve this in SAS? Thanks in advance.

A: What about this? `proc sql noprint; SELECT REPLACE(TRANSLATE(`str`, 'abcdefghijk', 'abcdefghjik'), 'c', 'd') AS str2 FROM `myTable`; quit;`

content and other services of relevant or of interest to children in general and to children with cancer. Further studies to elaborate on the role of social media for supporting children and adolescents with cancer and their families are of great value. In conclusion, social media have become a major source of information and are increasingly used by children and their families for supportive purposes. Of all psychosocial variables, the anxiety and depression scores varied the most. The social media gives children with cancer and their parents/caregivers access to information and support from other children and adults with cancer. The activity scores were significantly lower in the cancer groups compared with the HC groups, indicating a need for more activity for the children and their families. The project was supported by the Finnish Cancer Organizations and by funding from the Finnish Cultural Foundation and Tampere Tuberculosis Association. The authors

According to al-Zuhri, al-Zayla'i was also inspired by the verse [1:7] "Who created the heavens and placed therein the stars."

The content in the French translation of the Hadith has two problems: (1) This only contains the Prophet (peace be upon him)

narrating two statements, however he (peace be upon him) makes mention of four statements and one of those is erroneous; (2) Nowhere in the Arabic is there any mention of "the bright-burning light" (5:1106) or "the Quraysh" (25:63), those being two of the statements which are said to have been narrated by the Prophet
