He applied for mortgages for himself and a company that he controlled without their knowledge. He knew he was not honest. His downfall came when he tried to bilk more from the bank for a loan. Using forged documents he was able to convince the bank the loan was guaranteed by the government. When the bank sought repayment, his scheme fell apart. "He's going to be very hard on us," the bank's attorney told jurors. "All the documents he used are available on the Internet," Sumter County Assistant District Attorney Jennifer Morgan said. "This is the defendant's own culpability." The fake loan took place in 2004, when Johnson was a mortgage broker at Summit Mortgage Company in Sumter. "I had to give special attention to this case because we were working so hard to not have a foreclosure on this house," Morgan said. On trial in Sumter Superior Court, a jury convicted Johnson of one count each of felony forgery and uttering forged documents. He was sentenced to two years in prison and $10,000 in fines. The maximum prison sentence is seven years, the maximum fine is $5,000 and the maximum period of probation is three years, the press release said. Tuesday, February 9, 2014 Are You Scared of Windows 7? You are Not Alone. Here is my Knowledge base to get rid off all the
