France Puts Big Money Behind Cameron Support During the referendum campaign the 'No' side revealed that France were funding the 'Yes' campaign in the UK. The French gave the 'Yes' side £2 million. The news was buried and until now the French have denied that it was ever true. Now the French Prime Minister Manuel Valls is trying to play down those fears. It is believed the campaign was not expected to change the outcome of the referendum In a statement this morning, Mr Valls said: The European Union is a community of values, developed over years of common European action. Europe is more than a political union and more than a single market. Europe is a common area, founded on the values of freedom, democracy, the rule of law, equality between men and women, and the protection of human rights. EU membership is very important to France. The French economy is particularly vulnerable to uncertainty in the UK market. The UK is also a major source of inward investment and employment in France. French companies are likely to face major difficulties if the British decide to leave. The 'No' campaign statement to the French Prime Minister reads: France is so confident of the importance of its involvement in the EU that it has increased its financial contribution to the EU to £2 million to support an expensive campaign to persuade the British people to vote for staying in the EU. The campaign has not altered the outcome of the referendum. Comments Anonymous May 12, 2016 I cant recall who I am! Anonymous May 12, 2016 do you want a receipt?
