This is a video game simulation of what it means to live in a Democratic socialist society with limited scarcity. "If you are an internet user, a young person, a socialist activist, a student or simply 'ordinary person' who believes in freedom, you should know that it is absolutely possible to build free digital platform for free communication." We are happy to announce that we are launching our fund raising campaign. We need your support and donations to carry out our project and to start a social experiment for the network's future. We are building a free communication network for the left wing of the internet without censorship. Much like the Internet, which has already created thousands of articles, videos and many other kinds of content, we want the socialist network to become a discussion forum where people can share their ideas and engage in debates. Through people sharing their creative productions, we want to be able to create something genuinely new. We need to purchase a domain name to host our website and are looking for support to achieve this in the first place. As a result of this project, you can get back to:

- o Supporting the free internet
- o Breaking the internet monopoly of the big corporations
- o Contribute to promoting free culture and free speech
- o Help us create the socialist network

So, please, help us with your support and donations. We are very pleased to receive any amount you are ready to provide. We are taking various actions to make our fund raising campaign more efficient. This means that until the end of this campaign, you can send us a donation without a donation's page. It means that you can donate from any amount you are ready to give and without having to wait until the end of the campaign. You can make a donation to our fund raising campaign through PayPal. You can find a donation page here: You can make a donation through Bitcoins to 1JLRrk7Ea3f87o77T5Ad90j2rpYSTqwFHSW If you have any problem with this method of payment, please contact us. What's new:

From Track To Bus And Back Again On A Patriot Trophy "I told her to go to a cab, grab a sandwich, and come back." The roar of the corn-fed race cars flashes across the TV screen from the infield of the Talladega Superspeedway, and that's all you need. We have a NASCAR race to put on. A little over three hours earlier, Natalie wakes up to an empty bed and an empty bladder. She tries to push her eyes open, but today they don't want to cooperate. She sighs, closes them with more force, and thinks to herself, "Nice pillow." She rolls over and finds a sweaty, sweaty man lying next to her. Who is that? Is that you Dylan? No, your arms are crossed. That belongs to your friend Bruce. Who is Bruce, and why is he so sweaty? Natalie sighs, rolls back, and recrosses her ankles. She reaches over to check her phone and sees an unfamiliar text. You don't get texts when you sleep, do you? That's reserved for dreams. The text is from James. He tells her to go to her car and drive to one of the nearby fast food restaurants and grab a sandwich and come back. It probably won't take her more than an hour and he says he'll pick her up at midnight, 10 seconds past the hour when she should wake up. Before the trip seems like a horrible idea, Natalie herself texts a few hints about crazy people on the loose. James seems surprised by her playful text, and replies, "This is nothing. I have to protect everyone. You just never know what they're going to do." This doesn't make her feel better, and she thinks about what a pessimist he is. Her boyfriend, Dylan, has been texting her about crazy people on the loose all night. He has worried her out of her sleep, and kept her awake for an hour and a half, even though he didn't know what time it was. Dylan tells her that Richard Petty tracks at Talladega and that they are going to watch the race together, but doesn't think the track will be safe for the racers.

Natalie thinks her son will be asleep by the time she gets home, and just wants to wake up and drink the RedBull he likes, and put her feet up. Natalie gets the directions to one of the nearby restaurants off the phone, and then texts her
