The algal ancestor of the cnidarian coelenterates is thought to have been a unicellular organism. Among the extant members of Cnidaria, the Anthozoa are the most likely candidates for the zoanthid--and polyp--ancestor of the Cnidaria. Here we present the first complete genome sequence of a zoanthid, the sea anemone, Amphimedon queenslandica. The genome size is 35.4 Mbp and the approximately 50,000 protein-coding genes are well conserved compared with bilaterian animals and sponges. A total of 1625 genes putatively involved in immune function are identified, including CRISP and CRISP-like genes involved in recognition of potential pathogens, several sets of MRC-like genes likely involved in immune signalling, and a homologue of the interleukin-18 receptor (IL-18R). The evolutionary position of zoanthids was, according to phylogenetic analysis of our data, estimated at the base of the Medusozoa.[Treatment with cimetidine alone and in combination with bismuth in the treatment of active duodenal ulcers].
