Claire Danes has shared her inspiring thoughts on her impeccable fashion choices throughout her career, as she feels she never forgot her roots as a model. “It’s fun to feel like you get to wear what you want,” Claire, who turns 42 this week, told Allure magazine when asked about her youthful look. “I live in California, and we have access to really unique labels. When you’re working on your own, what you wear has to really become your own. It becomes part of your image, and you can’t ask for a more personal and colorful outfit than that.” Claire has led a colourful life – and does not limit that to her wardrobe. In the interview, she revealed that she is a proud heiress to a Native American pedigree, having a great-great-grandmother who was a war chief. Her aunt is also of Native American heritage, and she has a great uncle who fought in the Vietnam War. She discussed how she always chooses classic, refined styles. “I’m really drawn to crisp, clean shapes. I know that if I did wear bright colors, it would distort what my character is. Claire said her style has stayed constant over the years – and she feels her fashion choices have helped her career as a dramatic actress. “When I was growing up, I was very conscious of wanting to wear clothes that were very chic and ladylike – and that translates so well into acting,” she said. “I feel like I have a very recognizable look that stands out in auditions. 6d1f23a050
