The wholesaler had not reported to any regulatory body that orders were taking more than 1,000 days to arrive at their stores and some retailers had complained that deliveries were taking three to four weeks longer than usual. The wholesaler, which has not been named, has been fined £4,845 for the non-publication of food safety management system information (SFMS) and another £4,000 for not identifying the country of origin for non-EU countries. The rest of the fine - £120,000 - was imposed on an alternative basis and relates to the quality and safety of food products across the wholesaler's business. "As a result of this instance we have now put in place a formal mechanism for consumers to follow up any delivery problems where they occur," said Claire Spowers, FSA quality assurance manager, in a statement. "In the meantime, our priority is to ensure quality and safety continues to be maintained in other parts of the business." David Letterman and Andrew Dice Clay have been friends for more than 30 years, but apparently that doesn't mean Clay couldn't take a shot at Letterman's past. Clay, a guest on Jimmy Kimmel Live last night, told the host, "I like to tease and be funny, but I don't want to be mean." Watch below to see what that means. Clay says, "I like to look at you and say, 'Wow, he's got that one scrunched-up neckline look.'" Kimmel replies, "I'm the dude you love to hate." Is Clay also the dude you love to hate because you have no choice? In that case, Letterman might be just the guy to get your Monday-night grind on.Q: Saving an NSArray containing objects inNSUserDefaults I'm trying to save an array (NSArray) of Object (Objects1) toNSUserDefaults. The Objects1 have a custom class, named 'CardNumber', which implements NSCopying. 6d1f23a050
