I have been working on a Custom Control for iOS, In that control i have a side menu controller. When the user taps on a button it should show the side menu controller, how can i hide it after the user taps on another button? What i have tried is, When the user taps on the first button(sideMenuOpen) [self.navigationController pushViewController:mm animated:YES]; self.sideMenuController = [[SideMenuController alloc] initWithTopViewController:self.navigationController.topViewController]; [self.sideMenuController setMenuViewController:self.headerViewController.header]; [self.navigationController.view addSubview:self.sideMenuController.view]; When the user taps on another button(secondButton) [self.navigationController popViewControllerAnimated:YES]; [self.sideMenuController.view removeFromSuperview]; But in this case the side menu hides the view of the view controller being pushed on it, even when i go back using the popViewControllerAnimated the view is not hidden. I have seen that the side menu controller is nil when i use it in a view controller that is not the root viewController. Please help me with this. Thanks in Advance. A: You can do it like this: - (IBAction)secondButton:(id)sender { [self.navigationController popViewControllerAnimated:YES]; self.sideMenuController = [[SideMenuController alloc] initWithTopViewController:self.navigationController.topViewController]; 6d1f23a050
