Status of nursing education programs in Malaysia: Student, faculty, and institutional factors. The aim of this study was to examine the status of nursing education programs in Malaysia, particularly to identify what factors are associated with students' choice of nursing faculty/institution and the percentage of faculty members who have bachelor degrees. A cross-sectional descriptive study was conducted among prelicensure diploma, diploma, and degree nursing students and faculty members from the 495 nursing programs in Malaysia from 1 January to 31 December 2015. The research instrument was a self-administered survey tool based on a validated instrument used in other published studies. The percentage of faculty members with bachelor degrees was very low. This percentage ranged from 3.9% to 12.6% for university/faculty members, and was 16.4% for public sector department members. The majority of the nursing students preferred to do their clinical work at government hospitals. Choice of faculty/institution was primarily influenced by the university/facility and level of institution prestige. The results of this study were used to guide the Malaysian Nursing Council to implement a 4-year professional qualification in nursing. The results of this study showed that the teaching and learning environment, duration of clinical exposure, faculty development, and the transparency of the faculty's recruitment process were major factors influencing students' choice of faculty/institution in Malaysia.
